IX. Research

(a) Completed

- (i) Floristic and Structure of the Remnant Forests of the Obafemi Awolowo University Campus Ile-Ife, Nigeria and their Potentials for Conservation (1997)
- (ii) Eco-physiological Responses of Tithonia diversifolia (Hemsl) A. Gray in Nursery and Field Conditions (2007)
- (iii) Ecological Distribution of Tithonia diversifolia (Hemsl) A. Gray - A New Exotic Weed in Nigeria (2007)

(b) In progress

- (i) Effects of Different Weed Densities and Control in Maize and Cassava Agroecosystem in Ibadan, South Western Nigeria. Maize and cassava are common staples in south of Sahara. Efforts towards increasing their production over the years have been stalled by the effects of weeds on their water and mineral nutrients demands. The effects of weed competition on these food crops cannot be over emphasized. The research is of direct relevance to ensuring food security since the growing population of Nigeria depends on subsistence farming for their livelihood. This study has been completed and is being processed for publication.
- (ii) Effects of Heavy Metals on Crops and Vegetables Grown on Dumpsites. The gross inadequacy of land resources coupled with loss of soil fertility and degradation have forced many farmers to raise crops for human consumption on dumpsites. These dumpsites are reservoirs of heavy metals. When crops and vegetable are grown on them, they bioaccumulate these heavy metals which ultimately are passed on to animals and human through the food chain. This study therefore aims at risk assessment of these metals and their health implication when consumed by humans using the World Health Organization standards. This study is nearing completion
- (iii) Effects of Heavy Metals on our Aquaculture. Sea foods and fishes are rich source of proteins to humans. Most of our aquatic bodies that harbor these organisms are polluted by wastes (organic and inorganic) from industries. Some of these wastes end up in these water bodies due to uncontrollable discharge. This study also aims at assessing the risks of consuming the organisms harvested from these water bodies.

(c) Project, Dissertation and Thesis

- (i) Characterization of the Forest Types of the University of Ife Campus. M.Sc. Project, Department of Botany, University of Ife, Ile-Ife (1986)

- (ii) Biology and Control of Tithonia diversifolia (Hemsl) A. Gray - A New Exotic Weed in Nigeria. Ph.D. Thesis, Department of Crop Protection and Environmental Biology, University of Ibadan, Ibadan (2003)
